being, the e-mail, the memoranda, the letters, the other documentations from Nebraska officials will demonstrate conclusively the bad faith, and I have no doubt it is going to be shown. But what I want to do is get on the Attorney General's case. Some people say that I hate the Attorney General. I don't hate the Attorney General. Some people say the Attorney General is my enemy. The Attorney General is not my enemy. There's too much of a disparity between us. It would be like Goliath stepping on Tom Thumb, myself being Goliath. The Bible says love your enemies. Since he's not my enemy, I don't have to love him, Senator Smith, pursuant to the Bible. Let me go to something that was said in Judge Kopf's order because he summarizes this material much more succinctly than I would because I tend to digress when I'm talking about my friend, the General, otherwise known as Stenberg. From page 18, this is the caption that the judge put, 1993 through 1998 multiple meritless litigation. In addition to the litigation over the commission's deadline, which Nebraska brought and lost before Judge Urbom, there have been five other suits that specifically warrant discussion, and I won't read the names of all these suits because I can give them to you later, but one was untimely barred by equitable estoppel and laches. Estoppel is when you have taken a certain position that you later on want to take advantage of and the court tells you, no, you acknowledged certain things or you did certain things so now you cannot bring that up for your own benefit. Laches is when you take too long to do something. You just sit on your hands. That was why the Attorney General's Office lost that one. Then dealing with community consent...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...again, barred by the earlier suit. It had already been litigated. Your Attorney General brought it again. Then he brought a fraud claim against US Ecology regarding community consent. That was barred by res judicata because of the earlier two suits. Then,...is my time up? Oh.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thirty seconds, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Just about. Another suit was brought trying to put another member on the commission for Nebraska, which
